

Skin Analysis & Consultation Summary

Prepared for Sample Client • 6 October 2026 • Example data

Illustrative overall skin score

Visible priority: blemishes, redness and uneven texture

This example organises what is visible in one front-facing photograph. It supports a structured consultation and does not identify a medical condition.

What to discuss first

1 Visible blemishes

Multiple inflamed-looking blemishes are visible across the forehead, cheeks and chin.

2 Redness

Diffuse redness is most noticeable around active-looking blemishes and the central cheeks.

3 Texture

Surface texture appears uneven in the same areas; lighting and camera quality can affect visibility.

Interpretation

The score is a visual baseline, not a grade. Lower-scoring areas are presented first so the consultation stays focused. Repeat photographs should use the same pose, distance and lighting before comparing change.

Preview intent

This example visualises calmer-looking redness and fewer visible blemishes while preserving the person's identity, facial structure, hair, eyes, lips, expression and natural skin texture.

What changed — and what did not

VISUALISED

- Reduced the appearance of active-looking blemishes
- Softened diffuse redness while retaining natural texture
- Kept lighting, pose and framing comparable

PRESERVED / LIMITED

- No reshaping of the face, eyes, nose, lips or jaw
- No promise of a clinical or treatment outcome
- No replacement for an in-person suitability assessment

From observation to a sensible next step

A logical discussion guide for the client and practitioner

Suggested consultation sequence

01

Confirm suitability

Review skin history, current products, allergies, medication, sensitivity, pregnancy status and any painful, rapidly changing or persistent lesions.

02

Stabilise the basics

Discuss gentle cleansing, non-comedogenic moisturiser and daily broad-spectrum sun protection. Avoid stacking strong actives without guidance.

03

Choose one pathway

A qualified practitioner may discuss an acne-focused facial, LED support or a carefully selected peel only when appropriate for the client's skin and history.

04

Set a review point

Repeat a matched photograph after an agreed interval, commonly 6–8 weeks, and judge change from the images and the client's experience—not from the preview.

Questions to ask before proceeding

- What is the most likely cause of the visible blemishes, and does it need medical review?
- Which option is suitable for this skin type, history and current routine?
- What changes are realistic, over what timeframe, and how will progress be documented?
- What irritation, downtime or temporary worsening should be expected?
- Which signs mean treatment should stop and a doctor or dermatologist should be contacted?

Important safety note

This demonstration is not a diagnosis, prescription or guaranteed result. New, severe, painful, scarring, infected-looking or persistent symptoms should be assessed by a qualified healthcare professional. The after image is an illustrative preview, not evidence that a named treatment will produce this result.
